REMARKS

UPON

Dr. S H E R L O C K's

Case of Allegiance, &c.

TAVING lately perused Dr. Sherlock's Reasons (as the Book is commonly called) I cannot forbear imparting to you some very few

Observations upon them, not to show my Skill, Pref. p. 3

but to perform my Promise.

I observe in the First Place, That the Doctor thinks it necessary to convince all sober Chris Pref. p. +. stians, That men may swear Allegiance to King William and Queen Mary, without renouncing any Principles of the Church of England. But I hope we were not in such a condition, as that All

All Sober Christians stood in need of such a And God forbid the Principles Conviction. of the Church of England should be such, as not only to create in all sober Christians, a doubt whether they might swear Allegiance to the Present King and Queen; but should be so obscure in the matter, as that so Learned a Man as the Doctor is reputed, and so Wise a Man as he would be thought (for he never gave any Pref. p. 1. just occasion to the world to mark him out for a fool) should be at almost Two Years Pains to make a Reconciliation betwixt them, and the Duty of Swearing Allegiance to this present Government; upon the continuance of which the Dollar does more than once or twice acknowledge the Liberties and Religion of the Nation to depend.

Pref. p. 5.

He confesses he stack, and should have stack to this day, had he not been relieved by Bishop Overal's Convocation-Book; and had not the Venerable Authority of a Convocation, given him greater Freedom and Liberty of Thinking, which the apprehensions of Novelty and Singularity had cramp'd before: How mean are we Lay-men in the eyes of these Gentlemen! Nothing that was done, said, or writ, at and after the Revolution, tion, to justifie the Lawfulness thereof by the Laws of God and of this Realm, had any influence upon this Clergy man's Judgment or Conscience, till he met with a new upstart Convocation Book. Nay, his very Thoughts were in chains, till the Venerable Authority of a Convocation, gave him Liberty to Think. What the Lords and Commons did, the Consent of a Nation, the approbation of all Protestants abroad, the Interest of Religion and the Publick Weal, were not confiderable enough to give this man a liberty to think; his liberty of Thinking was cramp'd, till the Venerable Authority of a Convocation, came and let him him at liberty. I wonder the less to find him in his Book, enflaving his Life and Liberty, to what, in a mistaken Notion, he calls God's Authority; fince I perceive his very Thoughts are flaves to an Assembly of Ecclesiasticks.

vety few know how to find their way out of again. To judg truly of the legality of the late Revolution, requires such perfect skill in Law and History, and the Constitution of the English Government, that few men are capable of making so plain and certain a judgment of it, as to be a clear and safe Rule of Conscience.

Laymen think Laws and Constitutions of Governments to be sufe Rules of Conscience in thele Cases; and no such dark Labyrinths as the Misseries of the Holy Trinity and Incarnation, the Satisfaction of our Saviour, the Judge of Controversies, &c. which yet are all as plain to the Doctor, as a Pike-staff; the Scripture and Reason are admirably clear in all thelethings; but the Laws of a Nation, and the Constitution of its Government, are a dark Labyrinth. None are so blind as they that will not see. Till some Proud, Ambitious Clergy-men, and Flattering Courtiers, either really or pretendedly ignorant of our Laws and Constitutions, set their own and other Mercenary Heads and Pens at work, to represent our Government in quite other than its own native Colours, out of a base Compliance with a Court that lest no stone unturn'd, to overthrow it; till then, then, I say, the Constitution of our Government was so well understood by our Forefathers, that they supported and afferred it from time to time, at a vast Expence of Blood and Treasure, and transmitted it down to their Posterity, as they had received it from their Ancestors, confirmed with all the Sanctions that the nature of the thing was capable of; nor were ever beholden to a Foreign Prince to preferre it, till now; nor needed to have had recourse to the Prince of Orange to asfert their Liberties, if the overflowing of fuch Bigottry as this Gentleman is infected with, had not almost unmann'd the Nation, and prepar'd them for Slavery: And two ways were taken to effect it, the one, by persuading us, That we are Slaves by the Law of God; and the other, by representing our Government as being absolute in its Original Constitution; and that whatever Liberties the People claim a Right to, are either Concessions from the Crown, or Ulurpations upon it. And because some ignorant People have been imposed upon by the misapplication of Scripture by the Clergy, and by mis-understanding and misapplying our Anciens cient Histories and Records, and not thoroughly fearthing them neither, our Constitution and Fundamental Laws must now be represented as not clear, nor a safe Rule for Conscience; and therefore another must be set up instead of them, invented by a Clergy-man in his Study, directed in his Enquiry by a few of his own Profession, either ignorant of our Constitution, or profess'd Enemies to it, or both; and this Rule of Conscience not so clear neither, but that our Spiritual Guides are together by the ears about it, and the Learned Dr. Sherlock has been all this while finding it out: But found it he has: The Mountains have been in Labour, and behold the Moufe!

God, when he sees fit, and can better serve the Ends of his Providence by it, sets up Kings without any regard to Legal Right, or Human Laws.

P. 2.3.

Kings thus set up by God, are invested with God's Authority.

Subjects are bound to Obey, and to Pay and Swear Allegiance (if it be required) to those Princes whom God hath placed and settled in the Throne, when they are invested with God's Authority.

This

This is no new Invention of the Doctor's, not does he pretend to it; he had it (it feems) from Bishop Overal's Convocation-Book. But Sit Robert Filmer broached it before that Book came out, in his Patriarcha; and that it will serve the turn of every Usurper is evident, not does the Doctor deny it.

But that the possession of the Throne, and the actual Administration of a Government, creates a Right, the Doctor is positive in; not fuch a Right as shall Entitle a King to be what we poor Lay men call a King de Jure; but to be a Rightful King with respect to God: And why so? Why, because the most High Ruleth in the Kingdom of Men, and giveth it to whomfoever he will, and fetteth over it the basest of Men. It is he that remo-Weth Kings, and fetteth up Kings. Shall there be evil in the City, and the Lord bath not done it? They are the Ministers of God. All Power is of God, the Powers that be, are ordained of God. I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee Prince over my people Ifrael.

come to pass by his Providence, I hope is past dispute. And that such expressions as these, are to be understood only of God's Ordinary Providence in the guidance of Human Affairs, will perhaps appear by the common style of Scripture, in ascribing all things of what kind or nature soever, natural or moral, good or bad, immediately (in words) to the first Cause. God is said to instruct the Plowman in discretion, and to teach him: And that his skill cometh from the Lord, of Hofts, which is wonderful in counsel, and excel-Exod. 35. lent in working. So God filled Bezaleel with the Spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledg, and in all manner of workmanship. Job 40. 9. Thunder is said to be the Voice of God. God bardned Pharaoh's heart. Is there evil in the City, and the Lord bath not done it? So God fets up Princes, and removes them, by the Events of Providence: But that their Authority is derived immediately from God, or that they have, when setled in the Throne, any other Ambority than what the Constitution of the Government allows, much less that they can have an Authority from God, in opposition to a Legal Right, I shall believe, when when I see a Prince work greater Miracles than Curing the King's Evil, to Justify the delegation of such Authority.

The Doctor, throughout this Discourse, runs upon a notion of Mens Duty to Princes only, as if the Persons of Princes were the Sole Objects of our Duty and Obedience; That is his never 1503 @ . and proceeds from his Ignorance of the Nature of Human Laws in Political Governments. It is a notion that suits only with a Despotical Government, which is down-right Tyranny; nor has the Doctor an Idea of any other: And if he had not been invincibly prejudiced against the Truth, by the ignorance of his Education in things of this nature, that excellent Discourse of Mr. Johnson's, in Answer to his Book of Non-resistance, would have had another effect upon him than a scornful Reprinting of his own Book in Answer to it.

His second Section is taken up with proving from Bishop Overal's Book, That though the Church of England has been very careful to instruct her Children in their Duty to Princes; to obey their Laws, and submit to their Power, and

and not to relist, though very injuriously oppressed; and that those who renounce these Principles, renounce the Destrine of the Church of England; that she takes care to condemn all those wicked means whereby changes of Government are made; yet she teaches, that when such changes are made, the Authority is God's, and must be obeyed.

Here we learn, That if this be the Do-Etrine of the Church of England; then by the Laws of God, as the Church of England understands them, and teaches them to her Children, all the people of England are For to be injuriously oppressed, is to be oppressed contrary to Law; Executio Juris non habet injuriam; No Man can pretend that he or any body else is injured, when the Laws have their course. But from very injurious oppressions, the true Sons of the Church of England have no redress, because they must not result the Authority of God, which the Prince Regnant is invested with. Whatever the Constitution of the Government be; whatever Laws your Forefathers have provided for the continuance and preservation of it; whatever Legal Right you may fancy you you have to your Lives, Liberties, Religion, Properties; if you affert and defend this Le gal Right in opposition to the very injurious oppressions of your Princes, who in a Limited Government (as yours is acknowledged to be) have but a limited Power by Law; yet in so doing, you oppose the Authority of God: And so your Laws are but Cobwebs, your Legal Right, an Imaginary Notion: Your Rrinces have an Authority from God to cancel your Laws, and dispose of you and your Rights as they fee Cause. Thus by the Doctrine of your Church (as this Gentleman represents it) you are in no better a condition, than if you were Subjects to the Grand Seigmor.

Liberties, in opposition to the Tyranny of Kafohn, K. Henry the 3d. K. Edw. the 1d. &c. and who, if they had acknowledged such an irresistible! Authority in their Princes, as the Doctor contends for, and had not vindicated the Government by force of Arms, you their Poterity had long before now been in the same for a worse condition than the Peasants of France) were all Traytors and Rebels, tho warranted by the Laws of the Land to make opposition, nay, and sworn so to do by the King's own Commission, as particularly in the Reign of King John, and King Henry the Third. This Notion of an Irresistible Authority in your Princes, because they have God's Authority, was not then hatch'd: nor did it appear in the World till the degeneracy of the Reformation brought it forth: For Queen Eliza= beth's Parliaments and Convocations were of another Opinion: as has been proved by many Instances of their giving her Subsidies to relieve distressed Subjects against their own Princes: and when Sibthorp and Manwaring broached those Traiterous Positions in King Charles the First his time, they were impeached in Parliament, and severely censured for it. Yet notwithstanding all, this Clergy-man will have it be the Doctrine of the Church; which if it were pursued, does unavoidably destroy the State; and therefore by his own Argument (pag. 44.) can be no good Doctrine; because, if pursued, it would subject all Human Societies to be destroyed; whereas he acknowledges the End of Government to be the preservation of Human Societies. And

And he has the assurance to publish his Conceits of this kind, under a Government, that has been happily setled amongst us in opposition to, and in spight of these slavish Conceits of some of our Clergy. A Government, which those who contributed to erect, this Doctor brands with the loudest Calumnies: and yet under which he now seeks protection, and which he acknowledges now at last, being convinced thereof by the Events of Providence, to have the Authority of God, though introduced by the Devil.

But how does it follow, That this Do-Etrine of his must therefore be received as the Doctrine of the Church of England? because he finds it in Bishop Overall's Book. Do the Canons of a Convocation, neither assented to by Act of Parliament, nor so much as by the King's Letters Patents, make, or authoritatively declare the Doctrine of the Church of England? Is the Convocation the Representative Body of the Church of England? (I know they tell us so in the Canons of 1603. But I never found that any but some few of the Clergy believed them) Has what he calls the Church, a power to determine matters of Civil Right? orla

Right? Are we to go to School to Clergy-men to learn the Terms and Measures of our Duty and Allegiance to Magistrates; which all Mankind, but a few of that Profession in our own Nation, acknowledge to depend upon Human Laws, and the several Constitutions of Government, and which the body of our Clergy are so ignorant of, that they are a dark Labyrinth to them. When the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. And yet his Argu-Pag. 9, 10. ment drawn from the pretended Canons of that Convocation, are as good Authority as can be urged to the Members of the Church of England; fer if a Convocation cannot declare the Judgment of the Church of England, he knows not where me shall learn it. So that the Members of the Church of England are to be guided in mats ters relating to their Temporal Rights, by an Affembly of their Clergy: Though even our Popish Ancestors protested from time to time against the Authority of the See of Rome in Temporalibus. But I can tell him whence; and whence only he may learn the Doctrine and Judgment of the Church of England aus thoritatively; viz. in the Articles and the Liturgy, which have the publick. the the Legislative Authority; not in his Spurious Canons of 1610, nor in those of 1640, nor yet in the Homilies, though appointed by Act of Parliament to be read in Churches; for so is the Apocrypha; and yet we do not submit to those Books as Authoritative. All other Writings are but the Opinions of private Men.

The rest of that Section consists of some Stories of Jehn, Abab and Jezebel; The Moabites and Aramites, Ehud and Eglon, the Kings of Egypt and Babylon, the Four Monarches, Alexander, Darius, Jaddus and Casar. All which are no more to us, than if he had told us a Tale of Tom Thumb, or Guy of Warewick.

But it is no new thing for the Clergy to top Foreign Laws and Governments upon us; One of their Canons in 1603. is, Quicunque in posterum af simabit Potestatem Regiam non habere eandem Authoritatem in Causis Ecclesiasticis, quam Pii Principes apud Judeos & Christiani Imperatores in Principes apud Judeos & Christiani Imperatores in Principal Ecclesia obstinuerunt, &c. Excommunicetur ipso sa eto; &c. Our King's Jurisdiction in matters. Ecclesiastical, is settled and bounded by Laws of this Realm; and those Laws we look upon as the measure of their Authority. But Clergy-men make nothing of Human Laws, at least not of the Laws of England; But send us to the Jews, and to the Romans, to enquire what Authority their Princes had, and very boldly determine, under the penalty of Excommunication, That Our Kings have eandem potestatem: And yet they neither know what power our Laws allow to our Kings, nor what their Laws allow'd to theirs.

He grants, that King's Set up by God, have God's Authority; and that all Kings who are in the actual possession of the Government, are set up by God: And therefore having God's Authority, Allegiance is due to them. So that he resolves the Duty of Allegiance into the Authority committed by God to the Prince; the committing of which Authority appears by the Events For Providence is God's Govern= of Providence. ment of the World by an invisible Influence and Power; the Ends of which he serves by overru= ling mens wicked Designs to accomplish his own Councils and Decrees, and either disappoints what they intended, or gives success to them, when he can serve the Ends of his Providence by their wickedness.

But

But how shall Subjects judg when God serves the ends of his Providence by men's wickedness, and consequently when their obedience becomes due to a new Prince? why, obedience is due to God's authority, when we can reason- p. 16. ably conclude that God has made him King: That is, when the Providence of God has settled him in the Throne. But there are different degrees of settlement, which require different degrees of submission. The Doctor has gone hand in hand with Providence ever fince P. 17. the Revolution: The generality of the Nation submitted to the present King and Queen, and placed them on the Throne, and put the whole power of the Kingdom into their hands, though it may be the Doctor could not think them fet- P. 17. tled by Providence, whilest the late King had such a formidable power as made the Event doubtful, yet because he thought fit to continue in the Kingdom, he could live quietly and peaceably, pay taxes, give them the title of King and Queen, and pray for them as such, because we are bound to pray for all that are in authoriiy, and that their Majesties had, because they had power to do a great deal of good or a great deal of hurr. Here power to do good or harm is authority: And Thieves and Robbers have that. But it may be the King and Queen had Gods authority all this while before the Doctor thought fit to own it by swearing Allegiance to them 3 because he did not know they had it, till the power of the dispossessed Prince was broken, and no visible prospect of his recoverin his Throne again. So that men of the Doctor's opinion must watch till God has play'd his game out; before they can be ascertain'd what his will and pleasure is in these matters of obedience and swearing Allegiance to Princes: For the will of God, when known, is the rule of Conscience. But the will of God in these cases is no otherwise to be known but by the Events of Providence. So that men of such Principles as this Gentleman represents to us for Church of England Principles, must stay til the Storm be over, and then they'l tell us'tis fair weather. I cannot sufficiently express my indignation against men that can have the confidence to represent the Church of England, which is the body of the People of England, and who have a right to their Properties, and Religion as far far as these words, Right to Properties and Religion can be extended, as a fort of men who must not stir their singer in opposition to a Prince that invades this Right all at once, upon a supposition that the Prince is invested with God's Authority; as if a man could act by God's Authority in opposition to the Laws of the Realm, and his own Oath to observe them, and cause them to be duly executed; as if Princes had any other Authority from God, then to govern according to Law; as if resisting a Lawless Authority, which is no Authority, were resisting the Authority of God; as a fort of men to whom the Laws and Religion of the Nation, upon which all that can be dear to us depends, must never owe any thing for their preservation, tho in the greatest extremities, so long as they are guided by the spirit of their Church (tho thanks be to Heavens a late Divine Dr. Hickman has furnished us with a distinction betwixt that and the Spirit of God); No, they must be quiet and suffer all to be trampled under foot by God's Authority, unless wicked men form designs against God's Authority to preferve the Authority of the Laws and the Profession of God's true Religion: So that the best best things that can be done in the World must be done by wicked men, and in opposition to God's Authority, or not be done at all. And all this while that the Church must fit still, the Providence of God is at work by means of the Devil and his Agents, wicked men, against his own authority, which a King that has a legall title, but exercises an illegall power, is invested with; and berein consists the unsearchableWisedome of Providence that God serves his own Ends by their Wickedness. It feems he can never serve his Ends by the Godliness of the Church; but must carry on Ends for their good, by the free Ministeries of wicked men. All you Patriots, that with the hazard of your Lives and Estates stept into the gap to prevent Popery and Slavery coming in like a torrent upon Church and State, and who in so doing thought you did God good service, because your End was the prefervation of your own and your Countries Liberties, Properties and Religion under a legal administration of the ancient English Government, were all that while fighting against God, you were resisting the power ordain'd of God, and so doing you receiv'd to your selves damnation; and tho' God

God has wrought a deliverance through your wickedness, no thanks to you; tho' the Nation has consented to what you have done by as univerfal a consent as perhaps was ever heard of, this National consent is but an indication that God has given the King and Queen his Authority, but does not invest them with any legal Right, that remains in the dispossessed King yet: So that you and the Nation have but been endeavouring to transfer what it is not in your power to transfer, viz. a legal Right: And you have transferred what you never intended to transfer nor ever acknowledged; viz. an irrefistable Authority from God: Dr. Sherlock has found out now what you were then doing, and fees the consequence of your Actions, to your selves and all men else unknown. You aided the Prince and promoted the Ends of his Declaration, which were to deliver the Nation from Popery and Slavery, so as it might never be in the power of any Prince hereafter to introduce either but D. Sherlock tells ye, that can never be done, for it never will be Lawful nor indeed possible to exclude Slavery: because every Prince has God's authority, which is irresistable, and I'm sure he he that is your Prince, and is by the Law of God irrefistable, to him you are slaves by the Law of God. So that you have but changed Masters according to his principle, one of a rough temper for a more mild one: And all your security depends upon the good nature of your Prince for the time being.

I neither have leisure, nor if I had that, can I have patience, nor, if I had both, can I think it worth my while to run through the Book, and animadvert upon it Paragraph by Paragraph: For if it were much better written then it is, yet the writing of him, who slights and despifes to that degree, that he does upon all occasions every man's reason but his own, and in this Discourse sets up an Hypothesis of his own for aRule to men's Consciences in matters of Government, without any regard to the Laws of the Nation can hardly deserve so much regard as a serious answer would require

p. 16. require.

He tells us that an Oath to the dispossessed Prince ceases Cessante materia; for though the man be still in being, the King is gone. So that the Kingly authority may be transferr'd from one person to another another, But then they that affift and defend the new Prince in opposition to the title of him that is dispossessed, must (I hope) not for the future abhor that trea-Sonable Dostrine and Position of levying War by the King's authority against his person, &c.

He tells us the Scripture makes no distin-Hion between Rightful Kings and Usurpers: P. 17. The Rule is general; let every Soul be Subject to the higher powers, &c. Nor does the Scripture define to us, who these higher Powers are: And I'm fure they are not the same every where; In what person or persons the Powers lodge, which here are said to be ordain'd of God, and with what degree of Power they are invested, depends upon the several Constitutions of Governments; for if it be equally resisting God's Ordinance to Resist all Princes without distinction; then I know no difference betwixt an absolute and a limited Monarchy: then Princes have some dormant Authority or other, which the Law does not give 'em: Which are Principles of slavery peculiar to this last Age, and to some of the English Clergy.

He

He will not have St. Paul to be understood of lawful powers only, for then it would be necessary for Subjects to examine the titles of Princes, which would involve the Consciences of men in perplexities; for these are disputes amongst learned men, and he cannot think that the resolution of Conscience in matters that all mankind are concerned in, should depend upon such niceties as learned men themselves cannot agree in. He will hardly allow this Position, with reference to matters of Religion, which yet I think all Mankind are or should be concerned in. Nor ought a rule to be rejected upon a supposition that it is not clear, because learned Men differ about it; unless at the same time a New One be set up, which all learned Men doe agree But the disputes about Government are various, and that amongst very learned Men; and yet to the best of my Observation, all Men hitherto learned and unlearned have agreed that the Laws of a Nation, and the Constitution of it's Government are at least a safe, a true rule for Conscience: which if we shall leave and follow fome Ignis fatuus of a Schollar's Invention,

I know not whither it may lead us at last.

The Laws of a Nation may be trampled under foot and it's Constitution broken by an in undation of Foreigners; this is a force and a force gives no right, let the Doctor tell us to the world's end of All things being equally rightful with respect to God: men that are under a force, have a Right from Selfpreservation, which is a Law of Nature and consequently of God to rid themselves of that force if they can. Conquests end, when the Conquerors and Conquered come to mutual Pacts and Agreements, which are the Laws by which they agree to rule and be ruled for the future. Till such subsequent Pacts intervene, the conquered People shift for themselves as well as they can: But where there is no pretence nor appearance of any Conquest, where the Laws of a Nation, which are the publick Agreement of all the nation for their mutual defence and fecurity retain their force; they cannot be good subjects, who set up any other rule of conscience in matters of civil Right, Property or power: for that other rule is either E agreeagreeable with the Law, and then we need it not; or it is contrary to it, and then they that advance it, are enemies to the Constitution. I know little difference betwixt assuming an authority to govern the State, and setting up other rules then that of the Law toguide men's Consciences by in matters of Allegiance and Obedience to the civil Magistrates.

Our Saviour's argument relies wholly on posfession of power; whose Image and superscription hath it? If such a possession as having the Coynage of Mony requires Allegiance, the Do-For ought to have taken the Oaths when the new money came out. If not, then our Savior's argument does not justifie him now.

pag. 22.

We have no directions in Scripture about refloring a dispossessed Prince to his Throne again.
But if the dispossessed Frince retain a Legal right, then we are directed to restore him, Rom. cap. 13.v. 7. Render unto all their dues, tribute to whom tribute is due, custom to whom custom, fear to whom fear, honcur to whom honour. It the late King have a legal right to the Crown, he has a legal right to the Excise, the Customs, and Hearth-money, &c. And if he has a legal right to them, they are due to him.

him. And if they are due to him, we are commanded to render them to him. And that the Late King may yet have a legal right to the Crown, the Doctor agrees. The Providence of God removes Kings and sets up Kings, but alters no legal rights. We are commanded to do as we would be done by; and none of us would be deprived our selves of our own legal rights.

If the Late King have a legal right yet, then no English subjects can have a legal Right to oppose him; unless a man can have a legal Right to an Estate, and at the same time another have a legal Right to with-hold it from him; which is to make the Law a contradiction to it self; and yet these are the necessary consequences of the Doctors Positions.

That one Prince is at present placed in the pag. 26.
Throne, and the other removed out of it, does not divest the dispossessed Prince of his legal right and claim, nor forbid him to endeavour to recover his Throne, nor forbid those, who are under no obligation to the Prince in possession, to assist the dispossessed Prince to recover his Legal and successive Right bars

all other Humane Claims; so that the dispossed Prince has a just cause of War against the Prince in possession for the recovery of his Legal Right. And they that are under no obligation to the Prince in possession, are not forbid to affift him: Who these are that are supposed to be under no obligation, &c. I know not. I hope if the Prince in possession be throughly settled, he has God's Authority, and then all they that are his Subjects are under some obligation to him, or else God's Authority stands for nothing. But if foreign Princes are meant by those who are under no obligation, then at least the King of France has a just cause of War upon us to restore King James: And then at whose Doors must the Blood lie that is spilt in the War? If the late King have a legal Right, he has a Right by our Laws; and then in opposing his Tule we fight against our own Laws and Government. If the late King have a Legal Right to the Crown; then a man must be very learned indeed to be of opinion that the obligation of our Oaths of Allegiance to him ceases. It is not enough for the Doctor to say, That it was necessary for him to reason upon upon the Supposition of unjust Usurpations, and illegal Revolutions, &c. and that he was far from intending to reflect upon the present Government. With Reverence be it spoken, is a common faying with some, when they are going to speak blasphemy. His standing out so long, the grounds of his present compliance, his avowed Principles in his Book of Non-resistance, which he here justifies excepting in one punctilio, shew undeniably that the Dollor acknowledges no other Right in Their Present Majesties, but an Authority from God of his own inventing; and that their only firm fecurity, because only satisfactory to the Consciences of their Subjects, that of a Legal Right, which indeed is God's Authority, (and we acknowledge no other in these matters,) is by this Writer, as far as in him lies, quite blown up.

The duty of Subjects is to obey their Prince pag. 27. whilft in possession; but Kings must take care to preserve their Crowns by good Government: For if they notoriously violate their Subjects Rights, &c. it is too much for Subjects to venture their lives and fortunes, to keep them in the Throne to oppress them. But why should not Subjects.

jects be obliged in Conscience to defend such an injurious Prince? He has a Legal Title, Possession, a Settlement, he has God's Authority, he is irrefistable, and has the Soveraign Power. And is it no part of Soveraign Power to command the service of his Subjects? No, he is entituled only to a legal defence, the Militia, and the Posse Com. Thus when men are at a pinch, they feek refuge where they can. When their Do-Arine of Non-resistance, and a thousand oother ascriptions to the Power of the Prince turns upon them, they shelter themselves under the Law of the Realm: Which when things go as they would have them go, they subject to the Prince's pleasure: And to excuse their taking shelter under what they have so basely betrayed, they tell us thô they taught Non-resistance, they may practice Non-assistance without foregoing that Doctrine. So they may suffer the Lord's Anointed, the Light of their Eyes, and the Breath of their Nostrils to be taken in the Pits of Wicked Men, when he does not ferve for all that. Quo teneam vultus mutantem Protea nodo?

This Doctrine of Obedience and Allegiance to pag. 36. the present Powers is founded on the same principle with the Doctrine of Non-resistance and Passive Obedience. How the Doctor new moulds the Doctrine of Non-resistance, &c. to square with his Hypothesis, I am not concerned to trouble my self about. I cannot but wonder that any good stream should issue from so corrupt a Fountain, as that Doctrine (fo as it was lately preached up and inculcated) proceeded from. that Doctrine was taught of late, the Argument must run thus, Because the late King Charles and King James had received a Soveraign Authority from God, which must 'be obeyed and not resisted, thô the latter be now de facto deprived of the exercise of that Authority by Rebellious Subjects, aid-'ed by a Foreign Prince, to accomplish their wicked enterprise, which does not divest the said late King James of a Legal Right to recover it again; Therefore I do. swear Faith and true Allegiance to their Majesties King William and Queen Mary,&c. The

I pass over many things that are so obvious, as not to deserve a particular Observation; as the contradiction he is guilty of in telling us, that he could never find the Scriptures made any difference between Lawful and Usurped Powers, and yet that he stuck, and had fluck to this day, had he not been relieved by Bishop Overall's Book; tho all the help that Book could give him, was by helping him over that distinction. Oportet Mendacem esse memorem.

Another thing is the New-coyn'd account he gives of a limited Monarchy, viz. that in a limited Monarchy we are bound not to resist, only we are not bound to affist. The faucy introducing of private men's whimfies into Schemes of Government in opposition to Laws of Nations, and the commonsense of Mankind, has been observed before. But let the Doctor here take notice of an Expression of a far greater Man than himself, which comprehends the true notion of a limited Government; Thi Rex summam potestatem non habet, sed partem alteram populus aut Senatus, Regi in partem non suam involanti vis justa opponi poterit, quia eaterus non est superior. Grot. de jure Belli & Pacis.

He takes a great deal of pains to distinguish betwixt the present Case, and that of the late times under the Long Parliament, Oliver Cromwel, &c. and it is very observable how he gets over it upon his Principle. Why, the Government of the Nation was then quite overwhelmed; we had no King, nor Lords, and but a part of the House of Commons, who carried all by force. And what then, I hope there were Powers in Being; and if so, they were of God, tho usurped. But there was not a Settlement. I know not what he calls a Settlement; the High-landers in Scotland were subdued, Ireland quite reduced, the Government then in being, such as it was, acknowledged by all the Princes and Governments of Christendom, nor was there then a Powerful Prince that waged War against the then Powers in behalf of the then disposses of the Bishops.

When men are once out of the right way, they wander in various By-paths; and so the Doctor, Hobbs, Filmer, &c. leaving the Law of the Land, which is an agreement betwixt all Subjects, and siying to other notions of Power, and God's Authority, and the Law of Nature, and no body knows what, may please themselves with the Wit and Novelty of their own Speculations, but I am perswaded will never find the Body of the People influenced by what such Learned must be at so much pains to find out, and dress up with any tolerable appearance of sense.

The Doctor is much concerned to free God from any confinement to Human Laws: But fince he would not have men violate them, he ought (I should think) to shew that in taking the present Oaths he has not done it himself: Tho God is not confined to Human Laws, I do not know how the Events of his Providence can justifie men's breaking them, and their own former Oaths both at once. They that come into the interest of this present Government, upon the true Legal Foundation, upon which which it stands, have broken neither. But how to entertain the Doctor's imaginary Hypothesis of a Divine Authority, in opposition to a Legal Right; which is to make the Government of Divine Institution, and yet contrary to Law: How to make it safe for King and People upon his Bottom, I know not, nor shall enquire any farther.

God made man upright, but he hath found out many inventions.

To the Law and to the Testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.
